THE FINAL ADJOURNMENT.

LAST SESSION OF THE CONSTITU-TIONAL CONVENTION OF 1894.

President Choate Presented with a Group Portrait of All the Members and a Massive Silver Punch Bowl-Secretary Fitch Gets an Envelope Full of Green backs-Mr. Choate's Farewell Address, ALBANY, Sept. 29 .- The last prayer of the session of the Constitutional Convention was made by Bishop William Croswell Doane of Albany when the Convention opened this morning. The journal was read in full, in order that there might be no mistake about the method of sub mission. The printing of 20,000 more copies of the Constitution was ordered. There was a long discussion as to whether it would be better to print the new Constitution as a whole or to put the new parts in italics. It was decided to print the Constitution without italics.

On motion of Mr. Vedder at 11 o'clock a recess was taken until noon. During the recess the delegates crowded into the Assembly parior and organized, with Mr. Peck as Chairman, Mr. Peck said that he hoped the gathering would be the first of a series of meetings of the association of the delegates to the Constitutional Convention of 1894.

Ex-Senator Vedder, in a speech which was full of humorous allusions to the various members of the Convention, presented to President Choate a group portrait of all the members, enclosed in a large frame, and a massive silver punch bowl.

De Lancey Nicoll, on behalf of the Democrats also made a presentation speech tolning in the expressions of good will uttered by Mr. Vedder.

President Choate replied as follows: "I came to this Convention," said he, " wholly unacquainted with parliamentary rules, and perhaps my ignorance has been my protection. From the beginning I have had three able mentors. Mr. Alvord has given me at all times the benefit of his wide knowledge and ripe experience. Mr. Vedder has aided me from his famillarity with legislative practice, and Mr. Veeder has punctured me with points of order. "I confess I have been encumbered by the seventy-five rules which were adopted at the beginning of the session with my assistance. I have attempted honestly to apply them and to misapply them, as the exigencies of the occasion seemed to require. I have come to the conclusion that it is the office of printed rules to let the Chairman have his own way, and that there are only two rules which a presiding officer must observe if all others are laid aside. They are: Stick to it," and " Keep your temper." [Laugh-

I believe that the labors of this Convention will be successful and will become a part of history. How life will be clevated when the new Constitution is adopted! No small games of chance will be allowed. How labor will be honored! Shade of Springweiler! No damsel in her prime and the perfection of her charms was ever so coquetted with as we have coquetted with honest labor. Then there is the apportionment, which I believe will be adopted, and which gives to the honest rural districts their proper representation. It puts me in mind of the words of the poet, 'O for a lodge in some vast wilderness!" Mr. Nicoll may have to move from New York to Chautauqua. How I have come to love that county, from the praise I have heard of it since the apportionment was under discussion? There the women are all students and the men are all virtuous. Mr. Nicell may feel out of place there at first, but he will soon become accustomed to his surroundings.

"The time has come for us to go back to the Assembly chamber and complete the work upon which he seems only on the complete the work upon which he have been engaged for the past live months. I came to this Convention thinking that cach of the delegates wished to do his duty, aside from any other consideration. I am still of the same opinion. There has been a little byplay now and then, but it has not been serious, if our work is measured by the honest devotion which has been applied to it, it will unquestion—by be adopted by the people."

only public service that he had been called upon to perform.

When the applause had died away, Augustus Frank rose and, addressing the secretary of the Convention, Charles E. Fitch, said:

"Your friends deem themselves fortunate in securing so accomplished and experienced a gentleman to discharge the duties of secretary of the Constitutional Convention of 1893. They were under peculiar obligations to you for the efficient and satisfactory manner in which these duties have been performed. We are unwilling to separate at the conclusion of our labors without testifying to you, irrespective of party, in some slight degree our high appreciation of your services, so faithfully and impartially rendered. They have charged me to ask your acceptance of the contents of the enclosed envelope, with their cordial wishes for your future happiness and prosperity."

The envelope contained about $800.

In expressing his thanks Mr. Fitch said that he had often wished that he could come down into the arena and cross swords with the rest, and that he was at least thankful for this one chance of addressing the delegates.

The delegates and the spectators then returned to the Assembly chamber to complete their work and adjourn.

After the recess the engrossed copy of the Constitution was spread out on the stenographers' table for signing.

While President Choate, Secretary Fitch, and Secretary of State Palmer were performing this duty formal resolutions of thanks for their services were offered by members of the minority.

Mr. Nicoll moved a resolution thanking President Choate for his uniform courtesy and impartiality.
Mr. Durnin moved a similar resolution for the Vice-Presidents, Mr. Alvord and Mr. W. H.

Steele. Mr. Blake offered a resolution of the same na-

Mr. Biake offered a resolution of the same nature for the Secretary and his assistants.

Mr. Alvord thanked the delegates for their resolution, saying that he had spent most of his 84 years in public life and had in that time accumulated little of this world's dross, but he had accumulated a kindness and an appreciation which he would be proud to leave as a legacy to his children.

Mr. Steele also said a few words of thanks.

President (thoate then formally delivered into the charge of the Secretary of Siate the revised Constitution, with an engrossed copy of the resolution describing the method of submission, to be placed in the archives of the State.

Secretary Palmer said that it would be one of his pleasantest memories that he had the honor to be Secretary of Siate during the session of the Convention, and assured Mr. Choate that the revision would be properly cared for.

Fresident Choate then returned to his desk, and asked if there was none. Mr. Choate then said:

MR. CHOATE'S PAREWELL ADDRESS.

"GENTLEMEN: Before the motion to adjourn is CENTLEMEN: Before the motion to adjourn is put it may be proper for me to say a few words to you in the nature of a farewell. It is now mearly five months since we came together and mutually interchanged our eath to perform with fidelity the duties intrusted to us as delegates to this i one to this i one that the perform with fidelity the duties intrusted to us as delegates to this i one that long period of protracted and arduous labor, and, without any pride or boastings, with our hands upon our hearts, say that we have faithfully attempted to discharge the duties so assumed. We found a great responsibility and difficult duties intrusted to us. We were to decide, in the first place, the great question whether we should derise a new Constitution for the State of New York or merely repair, enlarge, and improve that ancient structure under which its people had prospered and lived in happiness so long. There could be but one answer to that question. We had only to go over this venerable structure to discover the defects which the ravages of time had made, the improvements and sciditions which the progress of civilication demanded, and to apply our wisdom, as far as we might, to the work of improvement and repair.

"More than four hundred amendments were proposed to it from the teening brains, not only of delegates, but from large numbers of civilicans who thought that they could aid in the work. In my judgment, one of the greatest elains to the grafficule of the people of the State which we can put forth, is that of those more than four hundred we have adopted only thirty-three. We have demonstrated that this, at least, was a conservative tonvention, mindful of the value of the experience of the past and of the practious value of the institutions which our fathers had handed down to us.

"We found at the outset four or five great which we found at the outset four or five great which we found. my be proper for me to say a f in the nature of a farewell.

value of the institutions which our fathers had handed down to us.

"We found at the outset four or five great subjects upon which the public mind had been exercised and in regard to which it seemed necessary that we should apply the improving hand. We have done it to the best of our abil-ity. With one exception all of these have re-ceived the joint support of the delegates. I may say, without regard to political or party consid-eration.

been successfully accomplished, namely, by means of it to bring justice home to the doors of the people throughout the State, more compietely, more promptly, more efficiently than it has ever been before.

"And then there was our common school system, that other foundation of the civilization itself, of which the people of this State well so proudly boset. We have done much for that. We have secured the establishment throughout this State of common schools in which all the children of the State may receive at the public expense an adequate education. We have guarded against that danger which had excited so much apprehension within the borders of this commonwealth, that perhaps there was already beginning, and likely to continue and to grow, a diversion of money raised by taxation for educational purposes into sectarian lands and control. All that we have successfully and, as I believe, absolutely accomplished by our educational article.

"There was another subject which deeply agitated the minds of the people of this Siste, and that was the application of public money in the way of private charity. By many who had not carefully examined the subject it was believed to be inherently an evil which could only be cured by cutting it out by the roots. We save through our Charities Committee most carefully examined that question, and we came to the conclusion that the system which the State had deliberately adopted and carefully followed now for more than twenty years, of employing the aid of houest, faithful, devoted private charitable institutions for the care of certain wards of the State that could not otherwise be as well cared for ought not to be departed from; but at the same time there were abuses incident to the conduct of that mode of charity which at least thore should be a stop put to, and we have deprived the Legislature of all compulsory power in the matter. Hereafter, if this Constitution is adopted, no subordinate division of, the State can be compelled by the central power of the State to devote a dol wherever any public money is devoted to a private charity for the public service it shall continue under public control, and the vigilant eye and the strong arm of the people shall be able to follow every dollar of the public money into every institution to which it is so devoted.

"There is one subject of variances." to follow every dollar of the public money into every institution to which it is so devoted.

"There is one subject of vast importance upon which we have not been able in like manner to agree without distinction of political preferences. But as to this iet me say that while as I believe upon the one side, happening to be one of the majority, that the scheme of apportionment has been devised with a pure and patriotic eye for the public good, helieving that the best welfare of all the people of this State demanded it, we give credit for equal good faith, equal honesty, equal patriotism to these in this Convention who cannot accept that view, and who believe, in other words, that it is unnecessary, unwise, and affected with political and parrisan spirit. Gentlemen, upon that subject we have agreed to disagree, and we lay our work before the people separately, and, in my judgment, it was a most magnanimous and generous act on the part of the majority of this body to separate that political question from all the others that are non-political, and to not attempt, as it would not have been right or fair to attempt, to say to the voters of this State: If you wish to have these wise and great and useful reforma that this Constitution contains you could only have them at the price of voting for this apportionment scheme, and on the other hand, to say to them you could only have them at the price of voting for this apportionment scheme by voting for these ten, twenty, thirty constitutions a many and which you may have personal and honest objections.

Besides these we have been able to contribute many other wise provisions of reform, which it is no time for me to now enumerate. I believe if they are adopted they will contribute to the welfare of the people of this State, and it seems to me that it is the duty of the members of this Convention, who have taken such an active, such an ardent, such a patriotic part in framing and passing them, to go their way among the people, explaining, instructing, advocating these various measures intended for the public good, so that when the 6th day of November comes our people throughout the length and nreadth of the State will at least understand our work, and if they like it, they will approve of it.

After Mr. Cheate had finished Mr. Vedder moved that the Convention adjourn without day. The motion was carried, and at 12:20 o'clock the Convention adjourned sine die.

After the close of the proceedings the minority members met in caucus and listened to the reading of the first draft of the minority address to the people. This will be made public next week. The Democratic members went down town to shake hands with Schator Hill before leaving for home this afternoon.

Term of Ten Years, Comptroller Fitch sold yesterday the franthise of the Staten Island Ferry for a term of en years from June 1, 1894, to Howard Carroll, the representative of John H. Starin, who outbid the Staten Island Rapid Transit Company, the present lessee. Mr. Carroll bid 514 per cent. of the gross receipts, while Superintendent Ganoon of the Staten Island Rapid Transit Company bid only 5% per cent. The sale of the Bay Ridge Ferry was postponed until Oct. 8, as there is still an injunction pending prohibiting it. There was an air of uneasiness around the Comptroller's office. Comptroller Fitch was expecting to be served with an injunction restraining him from going on with the sale, but one arrived. Deputy Comptroller Storrs read the terms of sale. The conditions were that the the terms of sale. The conditions were that the highest bidder would be required to pay the auctioneers' fee and to deposit with the Comptroller 25 per cent. of the amount of his bid, which would be credited on the rent of the first quarter. When the terms of sale were read, Mr. Carroll asked whether the purchaser was obliged to run the boats to any other point on Staten Island than that at which the boats now land. The Comptroller said be could only stand by the advertisement, which did not mention my particular place.

Auctioneer Peter F. Meyer then asked for bids. Frank S. Gannon bid the upset price. 5 per cent. Mr. Carroll bid 5%. Another minute and Mr. Carroll said 5%. Mr. Gannon walked up and down the room with his hands in his pockets. Mr. Carroll stood with his arms folded.

"Let him have it," said Mr. Gannon. The sale of this franchise has been blocked since May, 1883, by injunctions. Although the terms of sale plainly state that the new purchaser must may to the Staten Island Kapid Transit Company $175,000 for wharf property. Mr. Carroll said that he did not understand this to be the case. There may be a controversy on this point. The terms of sale do not compel Mr. Starin to buy the boats.

The Comptroller thinks he will be able to sell the Bay Ridge Ferry franchise on Oct. 8.

GEORGE W. VANDERBILT'S PALMS. Old Newport Pavorites for His Conserva-

tory at Asheville. George Washington Vanderbilt gave a finishing touch to his big estate near Asheville, N. C., last week by fitting out a conservatory in his North Carolina mansion with some of the largest palms under cultivation in this country. The palms were purchased for Mr. Vanderbilt by his gardener from J. M. Hodgson, the Newport florist, and were shipped in a special freight car from Newport for Asheville, on Tuesday. For fifteen years most of the palms bought by Mr. fifteen years most of the palms bought by Mr. Vanderbilt have taken a conspicuous place in the events of summer social life at Newport. At the ball given by Mrs. Willing of Philadelphia, the mother of Mrs. John Jacob Astor, two scasons ago, the palms were formed into a grove towering high over the heads of the guests and making a tropical garden the like of which had never before been seen at Newport. Cornelius Vanderbilt frequently made use of some of the giant palms, and they enhanced the attractiveness of many a dance at the Newport Casino, They were last used at the ball given by two French noblemen a few weeks ago.

The statements that one of the palms weighed two tons, and that the whole lof cost Mr. Vanderbilt $10,000, are far from being correct. The purchase included twenty-four palms and tree forms, the value of which was $1,500. The palms averaged fifteen feet in height and 200 pounds in weight. The collection includes fifteen tree ferns, which Mr. Hodgson imported from Australia years ago. The long dark green leaves of the finest specimens reach twenty feet into the air. The others are sago palms of lotanically called chamserops excelsa, the leaves of which are made into palm-leaf fams. The leaves of one plant of the latter varioty measure nearly five feet in diameter. Mr. Vanderbilt has transplanted several immense palmetto palms from South Carolina, and when he has finished his palm collecting the young backelor millionaire will doubtless be able to boast of possessing the finest private conservatory in the United States. Vanderbilt have taken a conspicuous place in the Shopkeepers are not taking any risks in these young and tender days of business revival. A with specimens of a new ware, and each pior has its price tag. Yet you can't tell the price of has its price and. Yet you can't tell the price of a single article unless you go into the store and ask for it, for every tag is carefully turned so that its figures are hidden. There is much knowledge of human nature shown in this little scheme, for whether it arouses an almiess curtosity or leaves the possible purchaser unsatisfied on the question of cost it brings people into the store. And then, well, there's a whole brigade of clever salespeople within, enlisted under the hanner with the strange device. "Get the people in: we'll do the rest."

Commissioners of Taxes Must Show Cause Why the Assessment Should Not Be Vacated, George J., Helen M., Edwin, and Howard Gould, executors and trustees under the will of their father, Jay Gould, have obtained an ancillary writ of certiorari from Justice Lawrence of the Supreme Court requiring the Tax Commissioners and the Board of Aldermen to show cause on Oct. 4 why the personal taxes assesse against the estate of Jay Gould and against their individual estates for the current year should not be vacated.

No notice of the proceeding was taken by the respondents, so far as counsel for the Goulds could ascertain, and default was made on the return day. Each of the Goulds in the petition they present on the present application says; " Deponent apprehends that it is the purposa of the said Commissioners, and it will be the effect of their said omission and failure, unjustly to prevent the relator from obtaining any relief against the said illegal action of the Commissioners until after it becomes time to pay the taxes levied on the basis of said assessment, and until interest and penalties accrue thereon in case of non-payment."

The petitioners quote the law in regard to such writs, which has this provision: "Disobedience to a writ or order in any proceeding under this act may be punished by the court as for a conternet.

In the papers submitted on both applications for certiorari George J. Gould says that he has paid his taxes at Lakewood, N. J., where he resides, and the other children of Jay Gould say that they reside at Tarrytown, where they have paid their taxes for this year. The executors say that the estate is taxable at Tarrytown, where most of the executors have their place of residence. The Commissioners taxed the estate of Jay Gould on a basis of $10,000,000.

COL. SCOTT'S PORTRAIT.

Artist Gerhard Says the Master Plumbers Still Owe Him $400 for Painting It. Mr. George Gerhard of 119 East Ninety-second street, is about to bring an action against a ommittee of the Master Plumbers' Association to recover $400 which, he says, is due on an oil portrait of ex-Col. George D. Scott of the Eighth Regiment.

Col. Scott is a member of the Master Plumbers' Association. A committee was appointed from the organization about three years ago for the purpose of having a portrait made of Col. Scott, and to present the portrait to him at the regimental armory with due formality. Henry G. Gabay was Chairman of the committee and James N. Knight was treasurer. Artist Gerhard says they called upon him and arranged to have him make a full-length portrait of Col. Scott, with a suitable frame, and agreed upon a price of $800. This portrait was ready by Feb. 21, 1800, upon which date it was presented to the Colonel at a reception and review of the regiment in its new armory.

reception and review of the regiment in its new armory.

Mr. Gerhard says he has been able to collect only $400. Charles S. Clark, on behalf of Mr. Gerhard, has obtained an order from Justice Lawrence of the Supreme Court, to examine H. G. Gabay and J. M. Knight, on Oct. 6, so that he can ascertain the necessary defendants and bring suit.
